To help medical experts treat heart disease, diabetes and cancer, U.Va. engineers developed a computer model to predict where new blood vessels will form.