In 1992, a U.Va. engineer invented Mentat, an early object-oriented parallel processing system designed to simplify the task of writing parallel programs.