In 1998, U.Va. engineers developed Personalized Information Environments, a technique that created a single virtual supercomputer by linking many computers.