To better understand, diagnose and treat disorders associated with aging, U.Va. engineers developed sensors that help physicians monitor patients remotely.