ALUMNI, PARENTS, FACULTY, FRIENDS,

WHOSE INVESTMENTS IN THE PROMISE
OF THE ENGINEERING SCHOOL MADE A
TREMENDOUS IMPACT ON STUDENTS, FACULTY AND RESEARCH.
Top: Groundbreaking of Rice Hall, April 2009. Bottom: Architectural rendering of Rice Hall.
IN SUCH TRYING ECONOMIC TIMES, I AM ESPECIALLY GRATEFUL FOR THE MANY INDIVIDUALS, CORPORATIONS AND FOUNDATIONS CONTINUING THEIR GENEROUS SUPPORT OF SEAS.

We all continue to experience extraordinary financial times. In Charlottesville, further cost savings at the University and SEAS are necessary. As we face such challenges, the continuing generosity of alumni, parents, faculty, staff, students and our corporate and foundation partners is essential to maintain the Engineering School’s tradition of excellence.

Unrestricted giving to the Engineering School is especially important during these times of multi-year state budget shortfalls and reduced federal support for higher education. Major initiatives grow from emerging ideas, new programs, building plans and other areas, which frequently have few existing sources of funds. Unrestricted giving to the Engineering School through the Annual Fund makes these initiatives possible, especially in difficult times when other funding sources are reduced. During the past year, we were fortunate that unrestricted giving was sustained at historically high levels. In fact, the total number of gifts to the Annual Fund increased. These gifts, in addition to the generosity of more than 300 Thornton Society members, those giving $2,500 or more, helped to ensure the excellence of the School.

Though significant challenges remain, the Engineering School continues to advance. The 2009 groundbreaking of Rice Hall, the new information technology engineering building, has been followed by rapid progress toward its scheduled 2011 completion. With construction in progress, fundraising efforts for Rice Hall are now focused on the $2 million needed to ensure that the technology infrastructure and other interior features of the building are world-class.

The School continues to capitalize on its corporate partners, including Rolls-Royce. The faculty continues to break new ground in their research efforts, this year attracting both increased research funding and the largest number of undergraduates in the School’s history. The entering class, bringing increased academic qualifications and a record high admissions rate of 34 percent women, will benefit from improvements in the academic experience, internships, knowledge exchange, experiential learning and international opportunities made possible through your support.

Engineering School alumni, faculty and students remain highly engaged. Tailgates in Darden Court remain popular and engineering alumni are increasingly active in encouraging other alums to get involved.

To all of you who contributed this year, I offer my sincere thanks. Because of your continued interest and support, the University of Virginia School of Engineering and Applied Science is a place like no other. I am grateful to you, and I know that the students and faculty, all of whom benefit from your generosity, are grateful as well.

Best wishes for the year ahead,

Bill Hughes (ME ’75)
President, SEAS Trustees
Steve and Karen Raber, parents of Katherine Raber (SE ’12), believe in the importance of education and have a deep commitment to making the world a better place. That commitment led them to join the Engineering School Parents Council and make an unrestricted gift of $300,000 for Rice Hall, the information technology building set to open in fall 2012. Their contributions will impact the Engineering School for years to come.

Steve is chief executive officer for Mark 10:27 Investments LLC and executive chairman of Purewire Inc. Karen is the fundraising chair for St. Joseph’s High School in Ghana. The couple resides in Johns Creek, Ga., but visit U.Va. frequently, particularly at sporting events where their daughter Katherine, who is a member of the varsity cheerleading squad, can be seen encouraging the team.

Thanks in part to the Rabers’ generosity, Rice Hall will be a showcase for advanced technology with broadcast capabilities, interactive “smart surface” tables in the café, built-in microphones and projectors in every classrooms, a display screen in the atrium and kiosks for room scheduling.

“We have been richly blessed in life and we believe in giving back to society to acknowledge the gifts and blessings we’ve received,” Steve said. “We also believe that America needs more engineers and that the program here does a very good job of preparing students to be a success in engineering or in any field they choose. We wanted to support those efforts, and in particular we are pleased to help make Rice Hall the showcase we know it will be for future students.”
Linwood A. “Chip” Lacy, Jr. (ChE ’67, Darden ’69) knows the value of hands-on learning in the field of engineering and, as a member of the SEAS Trustees, he is well-informed about the impact of shrinking funds on experiential programs at the School.

“I know that the lack of a suitable facility and disappearing funding have a real impact on the opportunities students have for forming teams, working together and creating projects for class work and competitions. Engineering is about applying knowledge, and I want to help increase opportunities in that area for students,” he says.

In addition to serving on the SEAS Trustees, Lacy is a member of the campaign cabinet where he has worked with others to ensure financial stability for the Engineering School. He is former chairman and CEO of Ingram Micro, a company that became the largest microcomputer wholesaler in the world. He has been a generous friend to the Engineering School and to the University for many years, with gifts that include establishment of the L.A. Lacy Distinguished Professorship, in honor of his father, the late L.A. “Bub” Lacy.

Lacy’s gift of $2.8 million includes $500,000 for program support and equipment for the Experiential Learning Program and $1 million for construction of a building to house student projects. It also includes $1 million for a large learning-center classroom in Rice Hall.

“The impact of his gift is enormous,” says Professor George Cahen, director of experiential learning. “The funding that supported experiential learning in the past is no longer available. Thanks to this gift, the program not only has survived, it has prospered.”

The Science and Technology Policy Internship Program began with a whisper and has grown to a roar, moving beyond Washington, D.C., beyond Richmond, Va., and beyond the borders of the United States to now include placements in Paris, France.

The program, which launched with one intern placement in 2000, this summer boasted 14 interns who were placed in high-level offices, including the National Science Foundation Europe Office and the U.S. Embassy in Paris and, in Washington, D.C., the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, the National Science Foundation, the offices of Rep. Nancy Pelosi and Sen. Mark Warner and the National Commission on Energy Policy.

The S.D. Bechtel, Jr. Foundation gift supported five students in 2009 and will support 10 students in 2010 and 15 students in 2011. The gift will allow the Engineering School to pursue plans to increase the number of interns and to expand to placements beyond the United States and France.

The philosophy of the internship program is simple — the world needs more policy-makers trained in science and technology, and it needs more scientists and engineers who understand policy. Thanks to the Bechtel Foundation grant, the program will continue to educate the next generation of leaders through rigorous preparatory classes and placement in policy-making offices where they are able to develop their analytical, communication and professional skills and where they have occasion to make real contributions to agencies that have national and global impact.
Doug (SE ’87) and Lois (CS ’83, ’87) Garland gave $100,000 to the Engineering School to establish an Engineering Entrepreneurship Fund to support undergraduate research and to encourage students to learn how to think like entrepreneurs.

Doug, who has held senior executive positions with Sprint, Yahoo! and Google and advised leading venture capital firms, knows the value that can come from turning new ideas into big business. “Living in Silicon Valley,” he says, “we’ve seen students at local universities leverage the start-up ecosystem and forgo conventional career choices in favor of starting companies based on their innovations. We wanted to help educate Engineering School students to allow them to have the same kinds of opportunities.”

The fund was used last spring to award $25,000 to Ride Forward, the winner of the spring 2009 Translational Seed Grant Competition, in support of its efforts to create a company that converts fleet vehicles to electric power.

This year the fund will provide prizes for the winners of the Entrepreneur Concept Contest, scheduled for November. Each Engineering School team will submit descriptions of ideas for a start-up business or product and will present their proposal to judges in a “live-fire” competition. Winner of that contest will represent the Engineering School in the Virginia Cup, a University-wide competition, at the end of November.

“The gift makes a real difference in what we can do to help our students hone their skills as entrepreneurs and develop their ability to identify significant new technology opportunities,” says Professor Bernard Carlson, coordinator of the engineering business minor. “We want to help our engineering students learn to leverage their technology expertise and identify significant opportunities that they can pursue as entrepreneurs.”
Named after William Mynn Thornton, the first dean of engineering at the University of Virginia, the Thornton Society honors leadership donors who contributed $2,500 or more to the School of Engineering and Applied Sciences between July 1, 2008, and June 30, 2009.

Every year generous parents, friends, faculty and staff support various programs around the Engineering School. This year, they contributed more than $2.1 million. We are grateful for the generosity of our extended Engineering family.

(Parents, friends, faculty and staff who are also alumni of the Engineering School can be found in the previous section, “Gifts from Engineering Alumni.”)

Volkswagen Group of America Inc. has awarded the U.Va. Engineering School $500,000 over the next five years to support creation of a new Rodman Scholars International Program, as well as to fund graduate fellowships.

“This International Program will strengthen the academic experience for current Rodmans while helping to attract students who have the interest and ability to face the new challenges confronting our society in the 21st century,” says Dana Elzey, director of SEAS International Programs and Rodman Scholars advisor.

Beginning next summer, the Rodman Scholars International Program will be offered annually to about 20 students to participate in two- to three-week trips to Germany, balanced among Wolfsburg/Braunschweig, Dresden and Berlin. Additionally, VW is offering three to five domestic internships immediately following the summer program.

Tentatively, the first trip will take scholars to Wolfsburg, Germany, to form a think tank around a theme identified in collaboration with VW. This trip will let students work side-by-side with VW engineers at the company’s research and design facility and with students and faculty from the University of Braunschweig.

The collaborative, international environment will allow Rodman Scholars to immerse themselves in topics such as transportation, environmental issues and other emerging trends of the 21st century.
Matching gifts multiply the impact of an employee’s gift to the Engineering School. In addition, matching gifts count toward Thornton Society membership. This year, more than $190,000 came from corporate matching gifts.

We are grateful for the generosity of these companies and their employees.
Every year generous donors support the Engineering School as a way to give tribute to select individuals. We are grateful to those who contribute to the Engineering School in this way.

Members of the Thornton Society, which is a society of leaders who contribute $2,500 or more to the Engineering School in a current year.

Members of the Cornerstone Society, which honors donors who support the Engineering School through planned gifts.

Alumni who made gifts to the Engineering School in honor of their reunion.

Members of the Lawn Society, which honors donors whose lifetime giving to U.Va. is $100,000 or more, who have included the Engineering School in a significant portion of their living will.

And the many alumni and friends who give their time and treasure to enrich our School and aid in our development efforts throughout the year.

THANK YOU ALL FOR YOUR SUPPORT OF THE ENGINEERING SCHOOL.
